H. Additional Information for Applicants

SC Adopt-A-Stream (SC AAS) provides the opportunity for those interested in the protection and improved management of South Carolina waterways to be directly involved in their monitoring and reporting. Volunteers provide vital data for streams that complements local and state data used to determine the health of our waterways. In sharing this information about stream conditions, volunteers, local communities, educators, and local government agencies can partner to protect and restore our waters. SC AAS trained volunteers have the potential to increase awareness within their own community of the relationship between pollution, watershed management, land use changes, and the personal responsibility of each individual within the watershed to be a better environmental steward.

The first step is to become a certified SC AAS volunteer by attending a FREE workshop! Volunteer trainings are available through Clemson University.

Click here to view upcoming training events.

As a SC AAS volunteer, you will be qualified to perform freshwater stream habitat assessment with physical/chemical, and bacteria monitoring (test shallow streams).

Volunteers will learn why the chemical and bacteria parameters are important to aquatic life, the significance of different levels, and how these levels can be affected. Trainers will lead the volunteers through field techniques and check techniques in collecting the sample and using

To Whom it may concern,

Destiny Baldwin is a very dedicated young woman. She loves animals, and everything that goes with it. She has always had a love for the great outdoors. Everything nature. She is very dedicated to one day being a veterinarian. Her goal in life is to never let any animal suffer without proper care. Every animal should be treated and shown love.

Thank you,
Khiannon Alexander

To whom it may concern,

Destiny would be a great candidate for this scholarship, she is kind, hard-working, and does her best on anything she's given. When her mom needs help with her business she helps with anything from cleaning to a receptionist. She helps groom animals and has helped me with work as well.
